The Association of Directors General of English School Boards of Quebec on Monday announced the creation of a recruitment site aimed at addressing the shortage of teachers and, more specifically, French teachers.

The portal, quebeceducationcareers.ca, will host a centralized location for candidates to learn more about the regions and school boards and search and apply for career opportunities and student internships. They can also access resources and salary data and find information about career fairs and events.

"There are many wonderful opportunities for employment in the English public education system," association president Sylvain Racette said in a statement. "This one-stop option will benefit the candidates and the member boards. We strive to offer an inclusive environment of respect, equity and positive recognition of differences."

The ADGESQ added that the project has received federal funding from the Official Languages Program of the Department of Canadian Heritage through to March 2023.
