What is RAC?

The Recognition of Acquired Competencies (RAC) is a process used to identify, document, assess and officially recognize your skills and competencies. RAC determines any missing education or training components you need, thereby accelerating or giving you direct access to a diploma.

Is RAC for you?

The Recognition of Acquired Competencies (RAC) is a process used to identify, document, assess and officially recognize your skills and competencies. RAC determines any missing education or training components you need, thereby accelerating or giving you direct access to a diploma.

How do I start?

With the help of an advisor you will go through an analysis and interview process to determine the competencies to be evaluated and conditions for recognition. This process will help determine whether you qualify for full competency recognition or if you require partial training. The advisor will then help you plan to take any courses you are missing to obtain a diploma.
