

Game Day

Looking for things to do during quarantine? This can be a great time to learn more games: card games, social games, board games, and the list goes on! Below are examples of common games with a little twist – give them a try! Play with your family members or play virtually with friends.

Card Games

Are you ready for a little fun, family competition? Card games are an excellent way to teach patience, good sportsmanship, motor and listening skills, concentration, and academics. Card games promote memorization, math concepts, matching, as well as number and pattern recognition. This week have fun with your children playing a variety of card games.

Click here for Crazy Eights

Click here for Card Battle 1

Click here for Card Battle 2

Click here for Card Battle 3

Bingo Games

Bingo is a traditional game that can be adapted to target many different skills, such as writing, math, word recognition, movement, etc.! Here are a few ways to do so. Click here for a fun and engaging Bingo game that works on writing sight words as well as letter formation and letter placement in the lines.

Want to get moving? Try this gross motor Bingo game!

Board Games

Board games are a staple for family fun and offer a playful way to work on important skills!

Snakes & Ladders, What's in Ned's Head, HedBanz Junior, and many other games promote social, math and language development.

Click here for an adapted Snakes & Ladders game targeting social communication and conversation!

Does your child have trouble with winning and losing? It's a common thing! Click here for a helpful video about being a good sport.

