

LBPHS Events and ECA's:

LBPHS after school ball hockey:

Have nothing to do after your fourth-period class? Well then bring your favorite hockey stick to school and take part in our after-school ball hockey games which take place on Wednesdays from three to four-thirty in the gym. This activity will be run and supervised by M. Laberge. There is no need to sign up, just show up with your stick and join in on the fun!

We Scare Hunger:

Throughout the month of October, we will have a food donation box where you can drop off any food items in the plaza which will be given to various charities to help end hunger in our society. Those who are hungry depend on you to help them and our school would greatly appreciate any donation, big or small. Don't waste this opportunity to make a difference in our world! Food collecting will end October 29th. Also, there will be our annual walkathon to end hunger on October 19th during your first-period class. ***

Book Review

Throne of Glass

Celaena does not have it all. She has been betrayed, tortured and hurt beyond comprehension and yet throughout all of this, she stands strong. In the fantasy novel Throne of Glass by author Sarah J. Maas, we are told the magical story of our main character, Celaena Sardothien.

In a fantasy world, a prince of a kingdom known as Ardalán must find someone to sponsor in a tournament. The goal of this tournament? To find a personal assassin for the king. But for Celaena, freedom from the prison in which she's been residing for a year. The prince chooses the protagonist, Celaena Sardothian, the most feared assassin in the kingdom as his fighter. What he does not expect, however, is her beautiful face, witty mind and sharp tongue.

This book is an incredible page-turner that had me awake at three o'clock in the morning reading. Hooking you from the very first sentence until the end, Maas's incredible writing techniques make reading her book feel like an addiction. If you enjoy epic fantasy and daring adventure this book is a must-read.

POETRY

She hated doing her hair
And deciding what to wear.
Which lip gloss made her lips more appealing
And which clothes were more revealing.
Whether to keep her hair up or down
Close to the state of a mental breakdown

She hated looking at herself in the mirror
Her flaws suddenly much clearer
The shape of her eyes
The way her mouth lies
The way her real smile,
Barely lasted a while

She hated the looks she received
And the way she was perceived
Her sadness dies
When he looks deep in her eyes
And says, "ur perfect"
And that was not a lie.
