

Dr. Jay Rabinovich

I would consider it a privilege to serve on Council and believe that my experience in both private practice and College committee work would allow me to make a meaningful contribution to the College's mandate of protecting the public. This includes helping to ensure that College programs and quality assurance measures remain current and relevant. Effective regulation requires clear standards for safe, ethical and competent care, as well as practical guidance to help dentists understand and apply those standards in everyday practice. Dentistry is constantly changing, with digital workflows and Artificial Intelligence being just two examples of why the College's standards, programs and guidance need to evolve as well. My 38 years in private practice, together with six years on the ICRC and my progression to the role of ICRC panel chair, have given me a broad understanding of dental practice and the College's regulatory responsibilities. I believe this experience allows me to consider issues from an informed point of view while remaining fair, objective and focused on the College's mandate to protect the public. Throughout my career, I have worked with patients and colleagues from a wide range of backgrounds and experiences. My ICRC work has strengthened my skills in collaborative decision-making, considering different perspectives, facilitating discussions and applying regulatory standards fairly and consistently. I believe this combination of experience, insight and skills would allow me to contribute thoughtfully and constructively to Council discussions and decisions, while always keeping public protection at the forefront.
